

Palm Springs Life

The Home of Spartacus

Don't miss a rare opportunity to peek inside one of Palm Springs' most famed celebrity digs — the Kirk Douglas House — during Modernism Week Fall Preview.

LYDIA KREMER AUGUST 18, 2017 MODERNISM, REAL ESTATE SPONSORED CONTENT, THE GUIDE

The Kirk Douglas home on Via Lola in the Old Las Palmas neighborhood of Palm Springs.
PHOTO BY SALLY DAVIES COURTESY OF PALM SPRINGS HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Joel Douglas remembers the gate behind his parents' home in the Old Las Palmas neighborhood of Palm Springs. It connected to the home of Dinah Shore.

"It was a terrific place to live; we had so many friends who were neighbors — Dean Martin, Sidney Sheldon lived next door, and Dinah Shore's house was behind us," Douglas says. "We had tennis parties every Sunday."

Douglas is the son of actor Kirk Douglas, who will turn 101 in December, and the younger brother of actor Michael Douglas — the two were both offspring of Kirk's first marriage to Diana Dill. Together with their half-brothers, Peter and Eric, from Kirk's second longtime marriage, to Anne Douglas, the family often spent summers in Palm Springs.

"Mike and I would come out on vacations from about age 12 or so. The home has quite a history to it," Joel recalls. "Every guest you can imagine visited. When Henry Kissinger was up there for a week, we had to install special phones with 10 lines. They're still there."

Designed by Donald Wexler and built by Robert Higgins in 1954, the 4,000 square-foot home was originally built for Bob Howard, whose father owned the legendary thoroughbred racehorse, Seabiscuit. Howard kept it for a short time before selling the property to the Douglasses in 1957. Kirk Douglas sold the home in 1999.

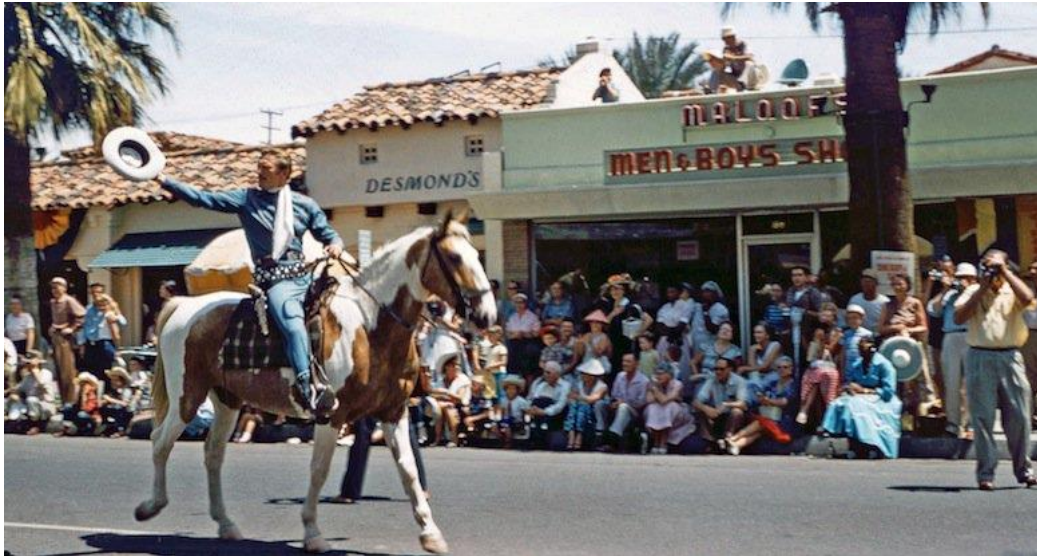

The Palm Springs Preservation Foundation will host a tour of the spectacular Kirk Douglas Residence during Modernism Week Fall Preview, which runs Oct. 19 through 22. The tour will be held from 1 to 4 p.m., Oct. 21.

The Douglas clan enjoyed many family gatherings at their Palm Springs home. Standing from left, Michael Douglas and Joel Douglas. Seated: Peter Douglas, Kirk Douglas, Anne Douglas, and Eric Douglas. PHOTO BY BILL ANDERSON. ©PALM SPRINGS ART MUSEUM, COURTESY OF PALM SPRINGS HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Joel, who owned a home in the same neighborhood until a few years ago, remembers Palm Springs as a close-knit community. "It was really a village then," he recalls. "It was a wonderful place and my father was so much a part of their community. He was the grand marshal of Desert Circus one year and Mike and I were deputies."

Desert Circus was one of the valley's first festivals — a week of community fundraising and festivities, established in 1934 and popular through the '80s.

Kirk Douglas, Desert Circus Grand Marshall in 1956, waves to crowds lining the parade route in downtown Palm Springs. PHOTO BY WINFIELD LINE, COURTESY OF PALM SPRINGS HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The current owners of the former Douglas estate, Michael Budman and Diane Bald from Toronto, bought the house in April 2016 and have given it a “sensitive renovation” during which some of the original architectural features have been restored.

Modernism guests will have an opportunity to tour the property, not to mention the tennis pavilion where Kirk Douglas papered the walls with colorful (now vintage) movie posters from his long and distinguished career in which he received three Oscar nominations (Champion, The Bad and the Beautiful, and Lust for Life), an honorary Oscar for Lifetime Achievement, and the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

A more recent photo showing the home with its swimming pool and fire pit. PHOTO BY MOOD CREATIVE

